Thirtieth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Jesuits in the Americas: Zipoli and His World

In a few short days we will have an extraordinary opportunity to celebrate our heritage as a Jesuit parish. I suspect each of you was drawn to St. Ignatius because of not just our vibrant sacramental life, but also by the intellectual honesty and rigor and a commitment to the arts that Jesuits bring to the church. This is one of my favorite things about serving on the staff here.

As we approach this momentous weekend, I'd like to take a few moments and draw your attention to a very special offering of Sacred Music in a Sacred Space: our concert on Friday evening, October 28, entitled Jesuits in the Americas: Zipoli and His World.

When we think of baroque music, the names Bach, Handel and Vivaldi spring to mind. They were but three of many master composers working from 1600–1800, the era commonly known as the Baroque. This florid, lively style of writing took hold all over Europe and made its way into the jungles of South America by way of—you guessed it—Jesuit missionaries.

One of the leading exponents of Baroque music in the New World was an Italian named Domenico Zipoli (1688–1726). Zipoli studied for a brief time with noted opera and keyboard composer Alessandro Scarlatti, and in 1715, was appointed organist at the Church of the Gesù (the mother church of the Society of Jesus) in Rome. The following year he left Rome and traveled to Seville, Spain, where he entered the Jesuits with the desire of pursuing mission work in the reducciones (towns built and administered by the Jesuits) of South America. After an arduous journey, he made his way to Córdoba, where he completed his formation and sacramental studies. Unfortunately, he died of an unknown infectious disease in 1726, before he could be ordained a priest. Although he spent only a decade working in South America, his music became widely known and loved throughout modern-day Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Bolivia, Peru, and Ecuador.

While we will celebrate the life and work of Zipoli, he was by no means the only musician associated with the reducciones. Martin Schmid, S.J. (1694–1772) was a Swiss priest, composer, instrument maker and architect who spent much of his career in the Chiquitos Province of what is now Bolivia. Schmid not only taught the indigenous populations how to play European instruments and sing in Baroque style; he taught their craftsmen how to build violins, guitars, bassoons, harpsichords and pipe organs. Many contemporary accounts state that the instruments built by the Chiquitanos rivaled the work of some of the master builders in Europe. A generation later saw the arrival of Italian Bartolomé Massa, who emigrated to Buenos Aires in 1752 and co-directed a theater for opera and dramatic comedies. He eventually made his way to Lima and made a small fortune as an actor, musician, and impresario. He left a body of exquisitely beautiful liturgical music, and we will present some of those pieces in the concert.

The rich cultural life created by the cross-pollination of native and European cultures is detailed in our program notes, written by James Keller, program annotator for the New York Philharmonic and San Francisco Symphony:

The musical life in these mission communities was extraordinary. Any reducción with a population of 2000 or more had its own orchestra. Larger communities were often equipped with music conservatories or with factories for instrument building. Choral singing was prevalent in all the mission towns, and performing forces could be impressive. When the musician Juan de Araujo oversaw the musical activities at the cathedral of La Plata (now Sucre, Bolivia), from 1676 to 1712, he directed an ensemble of 35 musicians. Many churches had an organ; some had two or three. A complement of a dozen violins was not out of the question, those being the most numerous instruments in ensembles that also could include multiple harpsichords, double basses (or cellos, perhaps), harps, trumpets, and other string or wind instruments. Musical scores flowed from European sources into South America through the ports of Argentina.

The Jesuits were expelled from South America in 1767, and most of their music was lost for almost two centuries. It's only been within the last 50 years that manuscripts have begun to surface, and reliable editions published. Not only were some of the pieces on our program quite difficult to find, I would venture to guess that some of them have probably not been performed in at least two centuries, and were certainly never heard in North America.

I sincerely hope you will join us for this unique musical journey as we celebrate our Jesuit heritage.

— K. Scott Warren
Director of Music Ministries

Interested in Becoming Catholic?

We have the privilege at St. Ignatius of welcoming those who may be thinking of becoming Catholic. If you feel attracted to the Catholic faith, we want you to know about a program at the Parish.

A group will meet during the year to inquire into the Catholic faith, to come to know Jesus through the Gospels, and to pray and to prepare for the Easter Sacraments.

This process, which is called the Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults, is also open to those Catholic adults who have not received the Sacraments of First Communion or Confirmation.
