Each year, the Church sets aside the fourth Sunday of October as World Mission Sunday. It is an opportunity to reflect on the universal nature of the Church. The Body of Christ is so much bigger than our Parish Community, even bigger than our diocese, or even of all the dioceses in our nation. As we prepare for the changes in our liturgy that will be inaugurated on the First Sunday of Advent this year, it might be helpful to put this change in the context of the universal church, of which we are an important, but small, part.

Having celebrated Mass in eight English-speaking countries (England, Ghana, Kenya, Malawi, Nigeria, United States, Zambia and Zimbabwe), I appreciate the fact that in all these countries I found the same sacramentary and the same lectionary. I did not have to deal with variations of the language, and could feel quite comfortable in each place. By the use of a common language in the liturgy we experience the bonding more easily than when I am attending Mass in a nation using a language with which I am unfamiliar. I know it is the same mystery and the same Eucharist, but I cannot experience it in the same way.

When the church embarked on a new translation of the liturgy in English, there was an effort to unify the language used in all English-speaking countries. Since there are variations in language usage in each of these countries, the translation was an attempt, first of all, to be faithful to the official Latin text of the liturgy, from which all language groups would be making their vernacular translations. Second, it was an effort to find a language usage that could be acceptable to all the various nations using that language. This might mean that I am not completely happy with a particular phrase or structure, but I can accept this as an expression of a more universal good – the bonding of people of the same language as one around the common table. As was expressed in a previous bulletin essay, some of the changes were made to bring the text closer to the Scripture from which some of the material comes. And the Scriptures are a common base for the expression of our faith in many different cultures.

Of course, what ultimately binds us together with Catholics around the world are our common baptism and our common faith. These are the essentials and these reach out to people even if their languages are quite different. But what is also true in a world where people travel more than ever is that we are more at home when worshipping with those of the same language. This allows us to participate in a meaningful way because we use the very same responses.

On this World Mission Sunday, we are reminded of the bonds that unite us to fellow believers all over the world. We realize that we must make every effort to grow in closer unity through our awareness of one another, our desire to understand those of different cultures, and to know that the Eucharist in which we participate is the same all over the world. There is also something that binds us more closely to the many people who celebrate in English and who represent nations that make up almost one third of the world's population.

Today the Church invites us to think outside of our own small box. It is an invitation to learn more about the universal church and to pray that her message may be spread more widely throughout the world. In his mission intention for the Apostleship of Prayer for the month of October, the Holy Father asks us to pray that the celebration of World Mission Sunday may increase in the People of God the passion for evangelization and the support of missionary activity through prayer and economic aid for the poorest countries. May this Sunday also increase our awareness of the bonds we have with people so different from ourselves, yet brothers and sisters in Jesus Christ, our brother and Lord.

The Pope’s Maestro:
A Talk by
Sir Gilbert Levine
Wednesday, November 9th
7:30 PM in Wallace Hall

Reception and book signing will follow the talk.

The Pope’s Maestro is the inspirational story of a most improbable friendship between New York Jewish-born conductor, Sir Gilbert Levine, and His Holiness Pope John Paul II.

Join Sir Gilbert Levine at St. Ignatius on November 9th as he talks about the compelling musical and spiritual journey of two men of different faiths who found in music the power to foster peace and unity in a profoundly divided world.

Sir Gilbert Levine is a distinguished American conductor who has led major orchestras in the United States and abroad. Educated at Juilliard, Princeton, and Yale, Maestro Levine has conducted numerous televised concerts on PBS and for the European Broadcast Union, and performed for His Holiness Pope John Paul II on a number of occasions.

Sir Gilbert has been honored by both Pope John Paul II and Pope Benedict XVI with the highest Pontifical Knighthoods accorded a non-ecclesiastical musician since Mozart.

The New Roman Missal: The Shape of Things to Come

Rev. Thomas Scirghi, S.J.
Associate Professor of Sacramental Theology
Fordham University

Our liturgy, with its language, symbols, and gestures, shapes us into a church, a worshiping community. How will the new Missal alter this shape?

In this parish teaching session we will address the questions:
- What is the Roman Missal?
- Why is there a new translation?
- How will the Mass change?
- Why is there controversy about the new translation?

Sunday, October 30th at 12:30 PM in the Church

Questions about the Revised Roman Missal

At each of the last two talks about the Revised Roman Missal: Receive What You Are (October 5th) and Greeting/Concluding Rite (October 12th) attendees were invited to submit questions. Two of the questions received are answered below:

In what way are we Christ?

In his sermon to those newly baptized, (Sermon 227), St. Augustine says the following: “These things, bread and wine are what the Lord wanted to entrust to us. They are his body and blood that he shed for us for the forgiveness of sins. If you have received this well, you are what you have received.” Hence, the Body of Christ means: the historical Jesus; the Eucharist; and us, the body of believers. We are the body of Christ on earth.

- Sr. Kathryn King, F.S.P.

What precipitated this change in the liturgy at this point in time? Was it particular incidents in the world?

For at least the past decade, many liturgists and high ranking Vatican officials have thought that the current English translation could be improved and better modeled after the original Latin texts. No Mass text, not even the Latin text, is ever considered final and beyond revision. The English translation soon to be introduced is part of the continuing evolution of the Eucharistic liturgy that began in the earliest days of the Church. The hope is that this latest change will help worshipers to better appreciate the mystery that is God.

- Rev. William Bergen, S.J.
