Catholic Schools Week

As we celebrate Catholic Schools Week, let's reflect on the challenges facing students and educators throughout New York City and how Catholic education provides an important alternative not just to Christians, but to all young men and women. Some of these challenges include:

- Shift in family structures: As the importance of family continues to change, young people are not able to rely upon it as the foundation of their academic life as they once could. We see this as students come to class sleep deprived, hungry and over-burdened because of a lack of stability at home.
- Less clarity about news and facts: Our young people are aware of injustice in their community and all over the globe. However, students often miss the bigger picture and don't take the time to understand what's happening beyond a headline or a Twitter post.
- The growth of technology: Technological innovation is providing students more opportunity, but it also presents more distraction and more corruption. Whether it's pornography or academic shortcuts such as "No Fear Shakespeare," students are tempted to give into laziness which ruins the critical thinking skills and destroys the creativity which can empower them now and in the future.
- Loss of mentorship: The relationship between teacher and student is breaking down because of physical and sexual abuse. We must always provide safe learning environments without losing the critical mentor-mentee relationship between teacher and student.

Catholic schools face these challenges every day and provide a safe, productive, and life-giving learning platform to young people hoping to renew the world they are part of. We must always support these unique qualities of Catholic education:

- Family engagement: Catholic educators realize that the student's ability to succeed in the classroom is dependent on the work done at home. Catholic schools actively promote the dignity of the family and see parents and students as collaborators.
- Dedication to improving our world: We believe that young people can help create a more united society. Catholic schools provide young people the chance to display their passion for justice and service by requiring Christian service hours. At Cardinal Spellman High School, our class of 2018 has already accounted for over 25,000 hours of community service.
- Intelligent use of technology: At CSHS, we have transformed the parent-teacher-student relationship by becoming a one-to-one learning community. This means every student is provided with a state-of-the-art Chromebook and every parent has real-time access to the work their child is doing in the classroom. We have set up parameters and best practices to make sure educators and parents train and discipline students who need to respect the power of this type of technological opportunity.
- Moral Education: Catholic Social Teaching respects and promotes chaste living for all young people. The hyper-sexualized culture has a grasp on our students and we teach them that their sexuality is a gift which must be cherished at all times, not forfeited over and over again.
- Mentor relationship: We realize that our young people want "a witness, not a teacher," as described by Pope Paul VI. In this way, Catholic educators are given the freedom to not simply be teachers who present data, but witnesses who preach with their actions.

It is important to remember that for Christians, education is everyone's business. Jesus confers on all Christians the titles of priest, prophet, and king. Therefore, even if we never set foot in a classroom, we must consider ourselves educators in the office, the parish, and the home. This community-centered philosophy exemplifies why we must support and send our children to Catholic schools.

SCRIPTURE CLASSES

And God Said What?! Difficult Scripture Texts
Mondays, February 5th – March 26th | 11:00 AM

The Bible confronts us with many stories that are hard to understand, that seem unjust, that condone terrible things. Why did God place a special tree in the middle of the garden and then tell Adam and Eve not to touch it? Why did God destroy the world through a flood? Why would Abraham be ordered to sacrifice his son? Why does Jesus teach his disciples to "hate" their parents? Why does Paul say wives must be obedient to their husbands? Join us as we explore these texts and more.

Apples and Eve:

Creation, Evolution and Original Sin

Mondays, February 5th – March 26th | 7:00 PM

The story of creation as recorded in the book of Genesis has loomed large in the American religious imagination. From the Scopes trial to contemporary debates regarding creationism vs. evolution, people of faith have sought to reconcile sacred scripture and the conclusions of science on the question of how the world came to be. Furthermore, in light of the findings of modern science, how are we to understand the significance of Adam and Eve and the doctrine of Original Sin? Join us we conduct a careful analysis of relevant scripture texts and survey the most recent thought and scholarship on these questions.

Accepting God's Friend Request

Saturday, February 3rd
Wallace Hall

Lunch | 12 PM
Program | 1 PM to 5 PM

When we are children we naturally relate to God the way a child relates to a parent. And just as our relationship with our parents evolves, matures, and changes as we become adults, so does our relationship with God. What does it mean to be "friends with God" as a young adult?

Join us as we explore a more mature way of being in relationship with God. Our day will include prayer, small group sharing, quiet time, and a presentation by Brian Pinter.
